B-29s Resume Attacks By

Cities At Once

GUAM, June 9—Five million or more Japanese have been left homeless by American air raids on five of the enemy's largest cities, Radio Tokyo acknowledged today.

The broadcast came as B-29s resumed their all-explosive raids on the Japanese homeland, striking simultaneously though in comparatively small force at aircraft factories at Osaka, Kobe and Nagoya in daylight today.

The assault coincided with Tokyo's appeal to aircraft workers to step up production to bolster Japan's waning air force for the critical battles to come.

Tokyo broadcasts, recorded in the United States by the FCC and relayed here, said 1,195,000 dwellings had been destroyed in Tokyo, Nagoya, Yokohama, Osaka and Kobe during American raids in the period March through May, leaving 4,930,000 homeless.

The enemy account did not include destruction in June raids on Osaka and Kobe.

By cities, the totals were: Tokyo—3,100,000 homeless, 767,000 dwellings destroyed; Nagoya—380,000 homeless, 96,000 dwellings destroyed; Yokohama—680,000 homeless, 132,000 dwellings destroyed; Osaka—510,000 homeless, 130,000 dwellings destroyed; Kobe—260,000 homeless, 70,000 dwellings destroyed.

The May 24 and 26 raids alone destroyed 257,000 houses and rendered 1,000,000 persons homeless in Tokyo, the enemy broadcast said.

Fanning out over southern Honshu, 100 to 150 superfortresses dropped 700 to 1,000 tons of incendiary bombs on the huge Kawasaki aircraft works at Osaka, the Kawasaki engine plant at Kobe and the Aichi company's Atsuta parts plant in Nagoya.

It marked the first time B-29s have hit three major Japanese cities in a single attack.

The raid also marked a return to precision bombing of key industrial targets after the blanket incendiary raids that left whole sections of Japan's largest cities in flames in recent weeks. For the first time since May 19, no fire bombs were carried.

A Japanese announcement said the raid lasted from 7:30 to 8:50 a. m. "Results" and "damage" were being investigated, Tokyo said.

The Kawasaki plant at the mouth of the Muro river on Osaka bay is one of the largest builders of navy fighter planes in Japan.

NAZI BETRAYAL
STORY IS TOLDKurt von Schuschnigg Gives
Details Of How Germans
Took Over Austria

By ANN STRINGER
(Copyright 1945 by United Press)

ISLE OF CAPRI, June 8—(Delayed)—Kurt von Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor, revealed for the first time today in an exclusive interview how he resigned his position on orders from Berlin in a vain attempt to save Austria's independence.

"On the afternoon of March 11, 1938, Hermann Goering told me on the telephone that German soldiers would march into Austria within two hours unless I resigned," Schuschnigg said.

"I pleaded for a little time. He finally agreed, warning my resignation was the only thing which could save Austria."

"At midnight that night I resigned. What else could I do? I ask you to remember above all else, first of all I am an Austrian. So I resigned."

"The next morning—March 12—when I awoke, SS troops had encircled my home. I was a prisoner—and German soldiers were marching into Austria."

Such was the story of Nazi betrayal told me today by white-haired, deeply-tanned Schuschnigg, whom I found on a sun-soaked, winding street of this storybook island. The onetime chancellor of Austria was window shopping, with his four-year-old daughter, Cissy, hanging to his hand.

Schuschnigg had just come in from the beach where a U. S. Army jeep daily takes him, his wife, and Cissy to swim and sun in one of the world's most beautiful spots.

U. S., WARD CASE
IS HEADED FOR
SUPREME COURT

CHICAGO, June 9—The government's long-standing labor fight with Sewell L. Avery, militant Montgomery Ward and Co. board chairman, appeared headed for the supreme court today after a U. S. appeals court ruled that seizure of the mail order firm's properties was legal.

The ruling reversed a decision by U. S. District Court Judge Philip L. Sullivan last Jan. 27 holding that the late President Roosevelt exceeded his authority in ordering the Army to take over Ward properties in Chicago and six other cities.

At issue was the government's contention that Ward's is engaged in war production.

The circuit court of appeals ruling, returned late yesterday, was concurred in by Judges Evan A. Evans and Otto Kerner. Judge William H. Sparks dissented.

"The decision means a closed shop," Avery said when informed of the outcome of the government's appeal. He indicated that the company did not intend to accept the ruling as final and added that he believed the opinion would not be accepted by the people.

Following the presidential seizure order last Dec. 28, Avery said he intended to push a test case to determine the constitutionality of the President's powers of seizure. An ultimate appeal to the supreme court appeared certain.

In handing down its decision, the court ruled that Ward's was an essential industry and, as such, subject to the provisions of the war labor disputes act.

CHINESE AIR FORCE BLASTS
JAP TARGETS

CHUNGKING, June 9—A revitalized Chinese air force, equipped with American planes manned by American-trained personnel, is blasting at targets throughout Japanese-occupied China, military sources said today.

The great expansion of China's air power has been reflected in daily accounts of its sweeps in the last 10 days against a variety of strategic targets.

Today's communique reported the Chinese planes destroyed or damaged more than 130 buildings, 77 boats of various types and a score of junks in raids on supply stores and communications in Kwangtung, Hupeh, Hunan and Shansi provinces.

The number of new Chinese pilots, bombardiers and machine gunners who have completed their training in the United States may not be revealed. It is known that they have been returning to China in a steady stream.

The Chinese air force is equipped with most types of American fighters and medium bombers. Like Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's 14th air force, the CAF has bases in all corners of free China. The 14th and CAF share all of them.

DEMARCATION LINE SET

Tito Forces To Withdraw
From Territory To Be Controlled By Allies

LONDON, June 9—The Yugoslav Telegraph service, heard by BBC, reported today that a military agreement has been signed by Yugoslavia, Britain and the United States concerning occupation of Istria, Trieste and the Slovene area.

The announcement was made by Foreign Minister Ivan Subasic.

"This agreement is the basis upon which representatives of the staffs of the Yugoslav army and the Allied armies will solve all necessary detailed arrangements," Subasic said.

It was understood that the demarcation line was drawn east of Trieste city and port and east of the line of communications connecting Trieste with Austria. Yugoslav forces were to be withdrawn west of the line and from Pola except for a force of about 2,000 Yugoslavs to be allowed west of the line. A Yugoslav liaison party will be attached to the allied military government.

"I hope and believe," Subasic said, "that with a happy solution of these particular questions and with talks of the military staffs soon to be held that a full mutual understanding will be reached—an understanding that is necessary for the further deepening of the cardinal inter-allied relations in the Adriatic and Central Europe which will be of great value for assuring peace in that part of Europe."

Well-informed circles in London could not confirm details of the agreement, but said it represented a victory for the United States and Britain.

FEPC, OWI FATE
UP TO SENATEHouse Cuts Appropriations
For Two Government
Alphabet Agencies

WASHINGTON, June 9—The administration looked to the senate today to bolster two of its house-slapped alphabetical agencies—FEPC and OWI.

The FEPC is the President's temporary fair employment practices committee, designed to prevent racial or religious discrimination in war industries.

The OWI is the office of war information, whose job is to inform the people of this and other nations what the U. S. government is doing in its war effort.

When the $752,000,000 war agencies appropriation bill emerged from the house last night after a tumultuous seven-hour session, it carried no funds for FEPC during the 1946 fiscal year beginning July 1. It carried only half of the $35,000,000 OWI appropriation recommended by the house appropriations committee.

The house passed the bill by a vote of 251 to 2 but not until after some hotly contested votes on amendments and a near fight between the two sides.

NATIONS HURDLE
MAJOR PROBLEMBig Five Trusteeships Plan
Tentatively Approved At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9—The United Nations conference hurdled another major obstacle to adjournment early today when a committee tentatively approved a big five plan for trusteeships.

The revised trusteeship system specifies as one of its objectives the promotion of "the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned." It also includes a special guarantee against any "freeze" of the status quo in present mandated territories.

The two provisions, written into the plan at Russian insistence, served to end a two-week deadlock on the trusteeship section of the world charter. Shortly after receiving Moscow's approval of the revised plan, the committee went into an extraordinarily long session that ended after midnight with virtual completion of a trusteeship working paper.

The system approved by the committee would guarantee Russia and China permanent seats on the trusteeship council whether or not they ever hold any trustee areas.

It was the second day in a row that belated word from Moscow on a conference issue made more likely the possibility of an early adjournment. Russia's change of mind on the controversial veto issue Thursday stimulated a new move to complete the world charter between June 16 and 20.

Conference officials hinted that unless the charter is completed and ready to sign within two weeks, President Truman might (Continued on Page Two)

FOOD COMMITTEE
MAKES ON-SPOT
TOUR OF NATION

WASHINGTON, June 9—Rep. Clinton P. Anderson, D. N. M., is taking his house food investigating committee for a final on-the-spot food tour of the Midwest and West before stepping into his new job as secretary of agriculture July 1.

The committee, which has already visited Chicago, Cleveland, New York and Boston, will now press its inquiry into food scarcities and black markets at open hearings on Omaha, Minneapolis, Yakima and Seattle, Wash., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It will be a larger-wide investigation with witnesses in each city recounting the food problems peculiar to their areas.

These hearings are expected to result in the committee recommendations many of which are likely to be carried over to Anderson's own desk when he takes over his new job.

GROOM, 101, TO FINISH WORK
BEFORE WEDDING

RACINE, Wis., June 9—James Augustus Cooper, hale and hearty at 101, takes a wife tonight for the third time—but not until he gets his day's work of tree trimming done.

Cooper, who took personal charge of plans for his scheduled wedding to Mrs. Julia Westpatet, 62-year-old widowed waitress, said he had to trim some 15 trees today, but that he'd try to be on time for the ceremony set for 6 p. m.

The ancient Racine tree trimmer steadfastly declined to say just where his third marriage would take place. But he did reveal that there'd be a reception at a neighborhood tavern.

Cooper, a flowingly mustached sprightly little figure of good humor, is twice a widower. It was to the love of such "good women" and to clean living that he credited his longevity.

Mrs. Westpatet, the white haired bride-to-be, planned to quit her waitressing after tonight's nuptials. She said she fell for Cooper because he was "full of the Dickens."

Cooper, born May 6, 1844, at Buffalo, N. Y., lived singly since 1923 after the death of his second wife. His first died in 1868.

HOLLYWOOD WILL GREET HEROES
IN GRAND STYLE

LOS ANGELES, June 9—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle are being welcomed back to the U. S. in Hollywood style. They starred in a preview last night at Denver.

Four gigantic C-54 Skymasters, escorted by a flock of P-40 Warhawks, bring the generals and 47 of their officers and men here in the final lap of a cross-country trip to their native state.

A 17-gun salute from the three-inch guns atop historic Ft. Moore will greet the returning generals, and southern Californians by the thousands will stage the most tumultuous welcome in Los Angeles history.

Los Angeles and the adjacent film city of Hollywood will have to go some to equal the welcome given the two triumphant generals last night in Denver—but they intend to try. Thousands of spectators lined Denver's downtown streets in unfavorable weather for a look at the generals.

Four-star Gen. Patton and his three-star partner, Doolittle, appeared to Denver residents in a different role than the one they assumed to defeat the Nazis in Germany. Both revealed themselves as gamblers in their own right and acted as a perfect foil for each other.

The American generals alternated wise-cracks with some very earnest conversation, adding up to the harder everybody works to whip the Japs, the quicker the Japanese will be licked.

ZHUKOV DOUBTS
HITLER'S DEATHRussian Leader States He Regards Fate Of Fuehrer
Unsolved Mystery

BERLIN, June 6—(delayed)—Marshal Gregory Zhukov said today that he regards the fate of Adolf Hitler as a deep and still unsolved mystery.

Zhukov said that Soviet investigators have not yet discovered any corpse which can be positively identified as Hitler's and therefore that the possibility still existed that Hitler may have escaped.

"We have not discovered any corpse which may be definitely identified as Hitler's," Zhukov told correspondents from Moscow on their initial visit to Berlin. "Consequently we cannot make any statement about his death."

"He could have fled from Germany up to the last minute. We also do not know what has happened to Hitler's aid, Martin Bormann who was in Berlin up to the end."

Zhukov revealed, however, that Hitler was apparently in his chancellery bunker up to two days before the fall of the Reich capital and that records had been found showing that he married his mistress, Eva Braun, 48 hours before the capital fell.

General Nikolai Bezarin, military commander of Berlin, said that several bodies had been found (Continued on Page Two)

MOBERLY STAGES
BRADLEY DAY IN HONOR OF HERO

MOBERLY, Mo., June 9—Today is Bradley day in Moberly. And the town closed up shop to welcome home its favorite son, Gen. Omar N. Bradley.

Actually, it will be a dual celebration. First of all, a celebration to greet the 12th army group commander home from the war and, secondly, one to observe Gen. Bradley's appointment as veterans' administrator.

An umbrella of C-46 army transport planes with gliders attached will cover the homecoming parade for Bradley and his wife, both graduates of the Moberly high school class of 1910.

The four-star general who commanded more American fighting men than any other except General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, was scheduled to lead a two-mile long parade.

Tonight, 44 members of the class of 1910 will be hosts to the general and his wife at a class reunion.

Gen. Bradley was born at Clark, in Randolph county, the son of a rural schoolteacher. He is an honorary member of the Moberly Rotary club and the American Legion post.

Extraordinary Session
Of Parliament

THREE CITIES BOMBED

Osaka, Kobe, Nagoya Hit
By High Explosive
Loads From B-29s

By United Press

The Japanese premier promised to fight "to the very last" today even as his homeland was battered by the first three-way superfortress raid of the Pacific war.

In a speech to an extraordinary session of the Japanese diet, Premier Kantaro Suzuki rejected unconditional surrender on the grounds it would mean the "complete destruction of Japanese policy and the Japanese race."

Emperor Hirohito himself opened the parliament session, a very unusual move. The government, struggling to keep the country's war effort together in face of bombardment and blockade, introduced emergency laws which would enable it "to take over completely."

This morning, the B-29 fleet bombed plants at Osaka, Kobe, and Nagoya.

For the first time since mid-May, the huge planes did not carry the incendiary bombs which had set Japan's great cities ablaze in previous attacks. This time they concentrated their high explosive loads on specific targets—the Kawasaki aircraft works at Osaka, the Kawasaki engine plant at Kobe, and the Aichi company's Atsuta parts plant at Nagoya.

Tokyo reported the raid lasted for one hour and 20 minutes, beginning at 7:30 a. m. The 70th major attack of the war by the 21st bomber command, it was the third since May 17 for Nagoya, the third in ten days for Osaka, and the second in six days for Kobe.

While Japanese homefronters worried over the new attacks their troops on Okinawa were thrown back by new American gains. American troops, led by flame-throwers, blasted into Hahagusu-ku, the fall of which would outflank the important Yaeju-Bake escarpment. On the western end of the last Japanese defense line, Itona already was outflanked.

Another Allied landing, this one on the northwest coast of Borneo, was reported without confirmation by Tokyo. A Japanese broadcast said an attempt had been made to land on Labuan island in Brunei bay, site of a big Japanese naval base. The enemy report said the Allied fleet included battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and 975 smaller warships. So far the Brunei landing was unconfirmed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

Today's Manila communique reported new gains in the Cagayan valley advance in northern Luzon, where the 37th division captured Bayombong, capital of Nueva Vizcaya province.

Chungking dispatches reported the revamped Chinese air force, equipped with American planes and American-trained fliers, had begun a full-scale assault on Japanese bases in occupied China.

LONDON DENIES
PETA IN MADE
SECRET TREATY

LONDON, June 9—Marshal Henri Petain's statement in Paris yesterday that he made a secret treaty with Prime Minister Churchill in October, 1940, was denied authoritatively today.

Peta, during questioning in his cell, said that because of the treaty he played a double game with the Germans to keep the French fleet from falling into their hands.

Authoritative sources said that during the fall of 1940 the British government made many attempts to persuade Petain not to let the Germans get the fleet, but that no treaty was made.

It also was denied here that there ever was any personal understanding between Churchill and Petain on the question.

ISLE OF CAPRI, June 8—(Delayed)—Kurt von Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor, revealed for the first time today in an exclusive interview how he resigned his position on orders from Berlin in a vain attempt to save Austria's independence.

GAIL PATRICK REVEALS BIRTH, DEATH OF TWINS

HOLLYWOOD, June 9—Actress Gail Patrick today was reported out of danger after the premature birth a week ago of twins, a boy and a girl, who died a few hours later.

Announcement of the tragedy was withheld until the star's husband, Navy flier Lt. Arnold Dean White, could be told. He was on an overseas flight at the time of the birth, which was not expected until September, and obtained special permission to fly to his wife's bedside.

Doctors said Miss Patrick had been critically ill and had been given blood transfusions and penicillin. She was removed to her home today.

The day the children were born, Miss Patrick's mother, Mrs. L. C. Fitzpatrick of Birmingham, Ala., was reported near death from a heart attack.

LT. White is a son of Troy W. White, West Moynard street, and is stationed on the West coast with the Navy air corps.

Tito Forces To Withdraw From Territory To Be Controlled By Allies

LONDON, June 9—The Yugoslav Telegraph service, heard by BBC, reported today that a military agreement has been signed by Yugoslavia, Britain and the United States concerning occupation of Istria, Trieste and the Slovene area.

The announcement was made by Foreign Minister Ivan Subasic. "This agreement is the basis upon which representatives of the staffs of the Yugoslav army and the Allied armies will solve all necessary detailed arrangements," Subasic said.

It was understood that the demarcation line was drawn east of Trieste city and port and east of the line of communications connecting Trieste with Austria. Yugoslav forces were to be withdrawn west of the line and from Pola except for a force of about 2,000 Yugoslavs to be allowed west of the line. A Yugoslav liaison party will be attached to the allied military government.

"I hope and believe," Subasic said, "that with a happy solution of these particular questions and with talks of the military staffs soon to be held that a full mutual understanding will be reached—an understanding that is necessary for the further deepening of the cardinal inter-allied relations in the Adriatic and Central Europe which will be of great value for assuring peace in that part of Europe."

Well-informed circles in London could not confirm details of the agreement, but said it represented a victory for the United States and Britain.

FEPC, OWI FATE UP TO SENATE

House Cuts Appropriations For Two Government Alphabet Agencies

WASHINGTON, June 9—The administration looked to the senate today to bolster two of its house-slapped alphabetical agencies—FEPC and OWI.

The FEPC is the President's temporary fair employment practices committee, designed to prevent racial or religious discrimination in war industries.

The OWI is the office of war information, whose job is to inform the people of this and other nations what the U. S. government is doing in its war effort.

When the $752,000,000 war agencies appropriation bill emerged from the house last night after a tumultuous seven-hour session, it carried no funds for FEPC during the 1946 fiscal year beginning July 1. It carried only half of the $35,000,000 OWI appropriation recommended by the house appropriations committee.

The house passed the bill by a vote of 251 to 2 but not until after some hotly contested votes on amendments and a near fight between the two sides. (Continued from Page One)

Mrs. Lucille Hunt Shaffer, Clarksville, was informed by the War Department that her husband, Pfc. Forrest A. Shaffer, an infantryman, had been seriously wounded in combat on Luzon peninsula.

Pfc. Shaffer was a selective service registrant in Pickaway county but was transferred to Ross county for induction into the Army. He entered the service September 7, 1942, and has been overseas since December 1943.

NATIONS HURDLE MAJOR PROBLEM

Big Five Trusteeships Plan Tentatively Approved At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9—The United Nations conference huddled another major obstacle to adjournment early today when a committee tentatively approved a big five plan for trusteeships.

The revised trusteeship system specifies as one of its objectives the promotion of "the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned." It also includes a special guarantee against any "freeze" of the status quo in present mandated territories.

The two provisions, written into the plan at Russian insistence, served to end a two-week deadlock on the trusteeship section of the world charter. Shortly after receiving Moscow's approval of the revised plan, the committee went into an extraordinarily long session that ended after midnight with virtual completion of a trusteeship working paper.

The system approved by the committee would guarantee Russia and China permanent seats on the trusteeship council whether or not they ever hold any trustee areas.

It was the second day in a row that belated word from Moscow on a conference issue made more likely the possibility of an early adjournment. Russia's change of mind on the controversial veto issue Thursday stimulated a new move to complete the world charter between June 16 and 20.

Conference officials hinted that unless the charter is completed and ready to sign within two weeks, President Truman might (Continued on Page Two)

FOOD COMMITTEE MAKES ON-SPOT TOUR OF NATION

WASHINGTON, June 9—Rep. Clinton P. Anderson, D., N. M., is taking his house food investigation committee for a final on-the-spot food tour of the Midwest and West before stepping into his new job as secretary of agriculture July 1.

The committee, which has already visited Chicago, Cleveland, New York and Boston, will now press its inquiry into food scarcities and black markets at open hearings on Omaha, Minneapolis, Yakima and Seattle, Wash., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It will be a larger-scale investigation with witnesses in each city recounting the food problems peculiar to their areas.

These hearings are expected to result in the committee recommendations many of which are likely to be carried over to Anderson's own desk when he takes over his new job.

GROOM, 101, TO FINISH WORK BEFORE WEDDING

RACINE, Wis., June 9—James Augustus Cooper, hale and hearty at 101, takes a wife tonight for the third time—but not until he gets his day's work of tree trimming done.

Cooper, who took personal charge of plans for his scheduled wedding to Mrs. Julia Westpatet, 62-year-old widowed waitress, said he had to trim some 15 trees today, but that he'd try to be on time for the ceremony set for 6 p. m.

The ancient Racine tree trimmer steadfastly declined to say just where his third marriage would take place. But he did reveal that there'd be a reception at a neighborhood tavern.

Cooper, a flowingly mustached sprightly little figure of good humor, is twice a widower. It was to the love of such "good women" and to clean living that he credited his longevity.

Mrs. Westpatet, the white haired bride-to-be, planned to quit her waitressing after tonight's nuptials. She said she fell for Cooper because he was "full of the Dickens."

Cooper, born May 6, 1844, at Buffalo, N. Y., lived singly since 1923 after the death of his second wife. His first died in 1868.

HOLLYWOOD WILL GREET HEROES IN GRAND STYLE

LOS ANGELES, June 9—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle are being welcomed back to the U. S. in Hollywood style. They starred in a preview last night at Denver.

Four gigantic C-54 Skymasters, escorted by a flock of P-40 Warhawks, bring the generals and 47 of their officers and men here in the final lap of a cross-country trip to their native state.

A 17-gun salute from the three-inch guns atop historic Ft. Moore will greet the returning generals, and southern Californians by the thousands will stage the most tumultuous welcome in Los Angeles' history.

Los Angeles and the adjacent film city of Hollywood will have to go some to equal the welcome given the two triumphant generals last night in Denver—but they intend to try. Thousands of spectators lined Denver's downtown streets in unfavorable weather for a look at the generals.

Four-star Gen. Patton and his three-star partner, Doolittle, appeared to Denver residents in a different role than the one they assumed to defeat the Nazis in Germany. Both revealed themselves as gamblers in their own right and acted as a perfect foil for each other.

The American generals alternated wise-cracks with some very earnest conversation, adding up to the harder everybody works to whip the Japs, the quicker the Japanese will be licked.

ZHUKOV DOUBTS HITLER'S DEATH

Russian Leader States He Regards Fate Of Fuehrer Unsolved Mystery

BERLIN, June 6—(delayed)—Marshal Gregory Zhukov said today that he regards the fate of Adolf Hitler as a deep and still unsolved mystery.

Zhukov said that Soviet investigators have not yet discovered any corpse which can be positively identified as Hitler's and therefore that the possibility still existed that Hitler may have escaped.

"We have not discovered any corpse which may be definitely identified as Hitler's," Zhukov told correspondents from Moscow on their initial visit to Berlin. "Consequently we cannot make any statement about his death."

"He could have fled from Germany up to the last minute. We also do not know what has happened to Hitler's aid, Martin Bormann who was in Berlin up to the end."

Zhukov revealed, however, that Hitler was apparently in his chancellery bunker up to two days before the fall of the Reich capital and that records had been found showing that he married his mistress, Eva Braun, 48 hours before the capital fell.

General Nikolai Bezarin, military commandant of Berlin, said that several bodies had been found (Continued on Page Two)

MOBERLY STAGES BRADLEY DAY IN HONOR OF HERO

MOBERLY, Mo., June 9—Today is Bradley day in Moberly. And the town closed up shop to welcome home its favorite son, Gen. Omar N. Bradley.

Actually, it will be a dual celebration. First of all, a celebration to greet the 12th army group commander home from the war and, secondly, one to observe Gen. Bradley's appointment as veterans' administrator.

An umbrella of C-46 army transport planes with gliders attached will cover the homecoming parade for Bradley and his wife, both graduates of the Moberly high school class of 1910.

The four-star general who commanded more American fighting men than any other except General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, was scheduled to lead a two-mile long parade.

Tonight, 44 members of the class of 1910 will be hosts to the general and his wife at a class reunion.

Gen. Bradley was born at Clark, in Randolph county, the son of a rural schoolteacher. He is an honorary member of the Moberly Rotary club and the American Legion post.

SUZUKI REJECTS UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER BID

Emperor Hirohito Opens Extraordinary Session Of Parliament

THREE CITIES BOMBED

Osaka, Kobe, Nagoya Hit By High Explosive Loads From B-29s

By United Press
The Japanese premier promised to fight "to the very last" today even as his homeland was battered by the first three-way superfortress raid of the Pacific war.

In a speech to an extraordinary session of the Japanese diet, Premier Kantaro Suzuki rejected unconditional surrender on the grounds it would mean the "complete destruction of Japanese policy and the Japanese race."

Emperor Hirohito himself opened the parliament session, a very unusual move. The government, struggling to keep the country's war effort together in face of bombardment and blockade, introduced emergency laws which would enable it "to take over completely."

This morning, the B-29 fleet bombed plants at Osaka, Kobe, and Nagoya.

For the first time since mid-May, the huge planes did not carry the incendiary bombs which had set Japan's great cities ablaze in previous attacks. This time they concentrated their high explosive loads on specific targets—the Kawasaki aircraft works at Osaka, the Kawasaki engine plant at Kobe, and the Aichi company's Atsuta parts plant at Nagoya.

Tokyo reported the raid lasted for one hour and 20 minutes, beginning at 7:30 a. m. The 70th major attack of the war by the 21st bomber command, it was the third since May 17 for Nagoya, the third in ten days for Osaka, and the second in six days for Kobe.

While Japanese homefronters worried over the new attacks their troops on Okinawa were thrown back by new American gains. American troops, led by flamethrowers, blasted into Hahagasaki, the fall of which would flank the important Yaeju-Bake escarpment. On the western end of the last Japanese defense line, Itoama already was outflanked.

Another Allied landing, this one on the northwest coast of Borneo, was reported without confirmation by Tokyo. A Japanese broadcast said an attempt had been made to land on Labuan island in Brunei bay, site of a big Japanese naval base. The enemy report said the Allied fleet included battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and 975 smaller warships. So far the Brunei landing was unconfirmed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

Today's Manila communique reported new gains in the Cagayan valley advance in northern Luzon, where the 37th division captured Bayombong, capital of Nueva Vizcaya province.

Chungking dispatches reported the revamped Chinese air force, equipped with American planes and American-trained fliers, had begun a full-scale assault on Japanese bases in occupied China.

LONDON DENIES PETAIN MADE SECRET TREATY

LONDON, June 9—Marshal Henri Petain's statement in Paris yesterday that he made a secret treaty with Prime Minister Churchill in October, 1940, was denied authoritatively today.

Petaín, during questioning in his cell, said that because of the treaty he played a double game with the Germans to keep the French fleet from falling into their hands.

Authoritative sources said that during the fall of 1940 the British government made many attempts to persuade Petaín not to let the Germans get the fleet, but that no treaty was made.

It also was denied here that there ever was any personal understanding between Churchill and Petaín on the question.

Suzuki stood before the diet and pledged that Japan would "smash the enemy in a decisive battle on our homeland," a battle he said would be "quite different from battles on other islands."

"Should the enemy attempt to land on our homeland," Suzuki said, "we will crush him by concentrating great armies in the necessary places and by easy and swift supplies."

He claimed Japan was fighting "solely for the self-defense of east Asia against the inordinate ambitions of the United States and great Britain."

Suzuki's protest that unconditional surrender would mean the "destruction of the Japanese race" seemed to be an attempt to offset the recent heavy American propaganda campaign, aimed at splitting the Japanese people from their war leaders. American propaganda has assured the Japanese that unconditional surrender does not mean their destruction.

The diet also was addressed by Japanese Navy Minister Mitsumasu Yono, who, in an outburst of frankness, said, "I must humbly admit the adverse war situation in the Okinawas." He also made his bid for an understatement prize by saying, "We have fallen a little somewhat short of securing full command of the air over the (Okinawa) area."

Beets frequently come up too thickly in the drills, necessitating thinning out. Pull the plants carefully and you can transplant them into another row.

In the small Victory garden to-matoes should be trained to grow upon stakes. Only about one-half as much space will be required for the plants if they are staked and better fruits will result.

Bobby Jones electrified the golfing world by winning the world's four major championships in one season of play, 1930. No other golfer has duplicated the feat.

If a few pumpkins are desired for pie and other purposes they can be planted in with the corn in the Victory garden. The Sugar or New England Pie Pumpkin is recommended.

LOWLY WORM IS IN HIGH REGARD—NOW

Earth Crawlers Hailed as Boon to Gardens and Lawns

WORMS HELP, TOO—This fine harvest of vegetables was given a big assist in growing by the earthworm.

By INGLE STREET
Central Press Correspondent

CHICAGO — Nature's lowliest creature—the earthworm—is turning. Instead of being just something to put on a fishhook and dangle in likely waters, the worm is fast becoming the pal of the city gardener and the large farm operator.

Those who cultivate the earth for a living or just for fun have been gradually learning in the past few years that the earthworm is about the best helper they have.

Living in the top six inches of the soil the wriggling worm has been found to be an active cultivator and on the job 24 hours a day.

The worm is a restless fellow and his little tunnels carry air and water into the ground wherever he happens to be at work. The worm is also the greatest producer of fertilizer that naturalists have discovered.

The worm's castings contain five times as much nitrogen, seven times as much phosphorus, 11 times as much potash and three times as much magnesium as other topsoil. Dr. L. C. Cartes of the Connecticut experimental station determined those facts after long study.

Feasting on waste, the soil itself, decaying leaves, farm and garden trash and manure, the worm is also an immense more productive as a fertilizer than herds of cows or droves of horses.

No one knows all about earthworms and exactly what happens in the gizzards between their suction mouths and fertile castings is yet to be found out.

The great naturalist and scientist, Charles Darwin, did discover, however, that the weight of worm casts on the surface of ordinary field soil in good condition may exceed 10 tons per acre per year. That is plenty of fertilizer.

Quite a gardener the worm. Also quite a farmer.

National farm circles this spring gave much attention to the experiments of Christopher Gallup, a Connecticut farmer who announced that the propagation of worms in the soil of his farm in stony New England had resulted in an increased yield from 80 to 196 bushels of ear corn.

Worms Best Farmers
Farmer Gallup, a successful Hartford insurance man, determined to make a success of the family farm which had first been cultivated in 1675 by his pioneer ancestors.

Gallup tried all the orthodox methods of soil building and spared no amount of commercial fertilizers. Results were negligible until he hit on the theory that worms are the best farmers of all.

Now Gallup cultivates his land to increase worm production, harrows in food for the worms at regular intervals and has as many as 150,000 worms in every acre of his better fields. Result—rich soil, heavy harvests.

Victory gardeners in recent war years have been trying every known method to make their gardens a success.

Now comes a worm farm at Worthington, O., to help them do on a smaller scale what Farmer Gallup is doing on a large scale. The worm farm raises worms for sale to all who cultivate the soil.

The worm has proved his worth as a soil builder and breeding the worm has turned into a profitable business. The farm at Worthington gets $5 for a shipment of 400 earthworms to gardeners and suburban landscapers.

Not only are the Ohio-bred worms good soil builders, their producers declare they are worms of special breed whose outstanding characteristics are rapid reproduction of their kind and a lack of the wanderlust.

While some worms may wander away and go to work for the neighbors, the earthworm farm worms are a special breed which never go more than two feet away from their original location, their producers declare.

This special breed of worm was developed by Dr. George Sheffield Oliver, physician and soil conservationist of Los Angeles. They are believed now to be beneficial to anything that grows.

It all adds up to quite a turn for the worm. Now that he has become something more than breakfast for a bass, science will undoubtedly find out some more interesting facts about him.

And we should not be calling him "him" all the time, either. Science already knows that worms are bisexual. Each one is both a papa and mama so each one produces other worms.

NAZI BETRAYAL STORY IS TOLD

ful settings. He wore a bright blue suit, a white shirt open at the throat, and rope-soled shoes.

Cissy—born in a concentration camp—was a shy, flaxen-haired, little girl dressed in a blue, printed and full-skirted frock with baggy blue pants showing underneath.

From the story that Schuschnigg told, it developed that he was not treated so badly in German concentration camps as first reported. He said he never once was questioned about his politics and never brought to trial, although the Nazis told him several times he would be tried.

For the first year and a half, Schuschnigg was imprisoned in Gestapo headquarters in Vienna. He spent the next two years in solitary confinement at the political prison camp at Munich.

On June 1, 1938, he married by proxy in Vienna, with his brother Arthur filling his place. This was in direct violation of Gestapo orders, but Schuschnigg already had the papers from the church and legal permission to marry before his arrest.

"However I was not allowed to see my bride until August, 1938, when I was permitted to have five minutes with her every Friday in company with a Gestapo guard," he said. "In 1940, I was allowed to see her three hours a week. Then in December, 1941, they let us live together, and we had our own little barbed wire encircled blockhouse inside the prison camp walls."

In December, 1941, Schuschnigg and his wife were taken to Sachsenhausen, near Berlin. They were evacuated in February, 1945, when the Russians neared the Oder river, and taken to Flossenbürg, in northern Bavaria. The week after Easter, when the Americans approached, they were moved to Dachau.

"We had a very good time at Dachau," said Schuschnigg, smiling. "It was good there for us. There for the first time in seven years I was permitted to converse with someone besides my wife. We had many conversations there. We had a good time. There I met a man who became a very good friend of mine. He was M. Leon Blum, former premier of France."

From Dachau with 160 special prisoners, the Schuschnigg family was taken to Innsbruck in the Tyrol. A day later they crossed the Brenner pass to a camp near Villa Bassa, Italy, where they were freed by Italian partisans and the American 85th infantry division.

Then Schuschnigg and his wife and child were brought here to Capri, where he is completely free to come and go as he pleases and where he has G. I. jeeps to take him wherever he wants.

In the interview, conducted partly in the street and partly in an office at the Hotel Paradiso, Schuschnigg refused to comment on the future of Austria, or his own political future.

However, he said the German people were not to blame for the war, adding:

"I am convinced that the great majority of German people hated war. I am convinced they had no choice. I believe the war was caused through Hitler, and Hitler alone."

Thirty-eight per cent of the Kawasaki company's Akashi plant in southwest Kobe was destroyed in a B-29 attack Jan. 19, but the Japanese had completed major repairs before today's raid.

The Aichi company's Atsuta plant Nagoya, builders of aircraft parts and engines, comprised two main buildings separated by a highway. The older factory was about 2,700 by 850 feet and the newer, 1,350 by 850 feet.

Nagoya also is the home of several of the great Mitsubishi aircraft factories, and these also may have been hit.

Today's raid was the third since May 17 for Nagoya, the third in 10 days for Osaka and the second in six days for Kobe. It was the 70th major attack of the war by the 21st bomber command on Japan.

Pacific fleet headquarters announced that tactical fighters based on Okinawa shot down eight enemy aircraft over Kyushu in southern Japan Thursday.

There still was no confirmation, however, of Tokyo reports that 200 American carrier planes raided Kyushu yesterday.

It was the first time during the conference that a Saturday night meeting has been scheduled.

The last remaining major issue for conference debate is on the Yalta voting formula. That begins this morning when a subcommittee considers the interpretation of the formula submitted by the big five yesterday.

Australian foreign minister Herbert V. Evatt is ready to lead the little nation's fight against the formula. It is conceded in advance, however, that the conference will adopt it as approved by the late President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef Stalin at Yalta in February.

one of which could have been that of Hitler but that nothing definite had been established. He said that friends close to Hitler said he committed suicide but that Russian investigators had not been able to verify their accounts.

"Possibly," Bezarin said, "he is hiding somewhere in Europe, probably in Spain."

The ruins of Hitler's chancellery were visited by correspondents but did not reveal any clues. The floors are still littered with private papers, dossiers and thousands of iron and silver crosses. The correspondents had a field day, rummaging through the rooms and collecting souvenirs from Hitler's desk.

The huge crystal chandelier had miraculously been preserved and on the splintered marble walls hundreds of Red army men and sightseers had scrawled their names and home towns.

The people of Berlin appeared to be as much puzzled about the Hitler mystery as the Russians were. They aid most of the suicide rumors came from the British radio even before Berlin's fall. Bezarin said that many of the Berliners regularly listened to BBC during the war but that none of them dared admit it.

Bezarin said that there was no doubt that Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels committed suicide. He said that he had made a personal investigation of the fate of Goebbels and that the bodies of Goebbels, his wife and two children were found in one of the underground bunkers of the chancellery. Goebbels, he said, poisoned his children and wife with potassium cyanide and then took his own life.

Her husband, Pvt. Theodore Polski, 39, wrote her that he believed the 50-piece set of silver service he shipped her from Munich shortly after V-E day had belonged to the fuhrer.

Pvt. Polski said each article of the set, which came from Hitler's Munich home, was engraved with the initials "A. H.", the German eagle, wreath and swastika.

Mrs. Polski hoped to soon get the package released from customs and see the souvenir for which her husband reported he turned down a major's offer of $500.

Beets frequently come up too thickly in the drills, necessitating thinning out. Pull the plants carefully and you can transplant them into another row.
In the small Victory garden tomatoes should be trained to grow upon stakes. Only about one-half as much space will be required for the plants if they are staked and better fruits will result.
Bobby Jones electrified the golfing world by winning the world's four major championships in one season of play, 1930. No other golfer has duplicated the feat.
If a few pumpkins are desired for pie and other purposes they can be planted in with the corn in the Victory garden. The Sugar or New England Pie Pumpkin is recommended.

LOWLY WORM IS IN HIGH REGARD—NOW

Earth Crawlers Hailed as Boon to Gardens and Lawns

WORMS HELP, TOO—This fine harvest of vegetables was given a big assist in growing by the earthworm.

By INGLE STREET
Central Press Correspondent
CHICAGO — Nature's lowliest creature—the earthworm—is turning, instead of being just something to put on a fishhook and dangle in likely waters, the worm is fast becoming the pal of the city gardener and the large farm operator.

Those who cultivate the earth for a living or just for fun have been gradually learning in the past few years that the earthworm is about the best helper they have.
Living in the top six inches of the soil the wriggling worm has been found to be an active cultivator and on the job 24 hours a day.

The worm is a restless fellow and his little tunnels carry air and water into the ground wherever he happens to be at work. The worm is also the greatest producer of fertilizer that naturalists have discovered.
The worm's castings contain five times as much nitrogen, seven times as much phosphorus, 11 times as much potash and three times as much magnesium as other topsoil. Dr. L. C. Carter of the Connecticut experimental station determined those facts after long study.
Feasting on waste, the soil itself, decaying leaves, farm and garden trash and manure, the worm is also an immense more productive as a fertilizer than herds of cows or droves of horses.
No one knows all about earthworms and exactly what happens in the gizzards between their suction mouths and fertile castings is yet to be found out.

The great naturalist and scientist, Charles Darwin, did discover, however, that the weight of worm casts on the surface of ordinary field soil in good condition may exceed 10 tons per acre per year. That is plenty of fertilizer.
Quite a gardener the worm. Also quite a farmer.

National farm circles this spring gave much attention to the experiments of Christopher Gallup, a Connecticut farmer who announced that the propagation of worms in the soil of his farm in stony New England had resulted in an increased yield from 80 to 196 bushels of ear corn.
Worms Best Farmers
Farmer Gallup, a successful Hartford insurance man, determined to make a success of the family farm which had first been cultivated in 1675 by his pioneer ancestors.

Gallup tried all the orthodox methods of soil building and spared no amount of commercial fertilizers. Results were negligible until he hit on the theory that worms are the best farmers of all. Now Gallup cultivates his land to increase worm production, harrows in food for the worms at regular intervals and has as many as 150,000 worms in every acre of his better fields. Result—rich soil, heavy harvests.
Victory gardeners in recent war years have been trying every known method to make their gardens a success.

Now comes a worm farm at Worthington, O., to help them do on a smaller scale what Farmer Gallup is doing on a large scale. The worm farm raises worms for sale to all who cultivate the soil.
The worm has proved his worth as a soil builder and breeding the worm has turned into a profitable business. The farm at Worthington gets $5 for a shipment of 400 earthworms to gardeners and suburban landscapers.
Not only are the Ohio-bred worms good soil builders, their producers declare they are worms of special breed whose outstanding characteristics are rapid reproduction of their kind and a lack of the wanderlust.

"We had a very good time at Dachau," said Schuschnigg, smiling. "It was good there for us. There for the first time in seven years I was permitted to converse with someone besides my wife. We had many conversations there. We had a good time. There I met a man who became a very good friend of mine. He was M. Leon Blum, former premier of France."

From Dachau with 160 special prisoners, the Schuschnigg family was taken to Innsbruck in the Tyrol. A day later they crossed the Brenner pass to a camp near Villa Bassa, Italy, where they were freed by Italian partisans and the American 85th Infantry Division.
Then Schuschnigg and his wife and child were brought here to Capri, where he is completely free to come and go as he pleases and where he has G. I. Jeeps to take him wherever he wants.
In the interview, conducted partly in the street and partly in an office at the Hotel Paradiso, Schuschnigg refused to comment on the future of Austria, or his own political future.
However, he said the German people were not to blame for the war, adding:
"I am convinced that the great majority of German people hated war. I am convinced they had no choice. I believe the war was caused through Hitler, and Hitler alone."

ful settings. He wore a bright blue suit, a white shirt open at the throat, and rope-soled shoes.

Cissy—born in a concentration camp—was a shy, flaxen-haired, little girl dressed in a blue, printed and full-skirted frock with baggy blue pants showing underneath.
From the story that Schuschnigg told, it developed that he was not treated so badly in German concentration camps as first reported. He said he never once was questioned about his politics and never brought to trial, although the Nazis told him several times he would be tried.
For the first year and a half, Schuschnigg was imprisoned in Gestapo headquarters in Vienna. He spent the next two years in solitary confinement at the political prison camp at Munich.

On June 1, 1938, he married by proxy in Vienna, with his brother Arthur filling his place. This was in direct violation of Gestapo orders, but Schuschnigg already had the papers from the church and legal permission to marry before his arrest.

"However I was not allowed to see my bride until August, 1938, when I was permitted to have five minutes with her every Friday in company with a Gestapo guard," he said. "In 1940, I was allowed to see her three hours a week. Then in December, 1941, they let us live together, and we had our own little barred wire encircled blockhouse inside the prison camp walls."

In December, 1941, Schuschnigg and his wife were taken to Sachsenhausen, near Berlin. They were evacuated in February, 1945, when the Russians neared the Oder river, and taken to Flossenbürg, in northern Bavaria. The week after Easter, when the Americans approached, they were moved to Dachau.

"We had a very good time at Dachau," said Schuschnigg, smiling. "It was good there for us. There for the first time in seven years I was permitted to converse with someone besides my wife. We had many conversations there. We had a good time. There I met a man who became a very good friend of mine. He was M. Leon Blum, former premier of France."

Pvt. William H. Drake, another Pickaway county youth who has spent months in a German prison camp, is now visiting his parents.
Pvt. Drake, captured in Italy in February, 1943, arrived Friday to spend a 60-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Drake, Pataskala. They resided in Ashville when Pvt. Drake went into service in October, 1941.
He arrived overseas in March, 1942 and served until his capture with several other Pickaway county soldiers. Following his capture he spent 27 months in prison camps before being liberated.

It includes 16 major buildings and many small ones with a total roof area of 269,000 square feet.

Thirty-eight per cent of the Kawasaki company's Akashi plant in southwest Kobe was destroyed in a B-29 attack Jan. 19, but the Japanese had completed major repairs before today's raid.

The Aichi company's Atsuta plant Nagoya, builders of aircraft parts and engines, comprised two main buildings separated by a highway. The older factory was about 2,700 by 850 feet and the newer, 1,350 by 850 feet.

Nagoya also is the home of several of the great Mitsubishi aircraft factories, and these also may have been hit.
Today's raid was the third since May 17 for Nagoya, the third in 10 days for Osaka and the second in six days for Kobe. It was the 70th major attack of the war by the 21st bomber command on Japan.

Pacific fleet headquarters announced that tactical fighters based on Okinawa shot down eight enemy aircraft over Kyushu in southern Japan Thursday.
There still was no confirmation, however, of Tokyo reports that 200 American carrier planes raided Kyushu yesterday.

be unable to attend the final ceremonies. Officials began prodding the 12 conference committees to clean up their unfinished business and went to the unusual length of scheduling the most important remaining committee meeting—on the veto issue—for tonight at 8:30 p. m. It was the first time during the conference that a Saturday night meeting has been scheduled.
The last remaining major issue for conference debate is on the Yalta voting formula. That begins this morning when a subcommittee considers the interpretation of the formula submitted by the big five yesterday.

Australian foreign minister Herbert V. Evatt is ready to lead the little nation's fight against the formula. It is conceded in advance, however, that the conference will adopt it as approved by the late President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef Stalin at Yalta in February.

Members of the trusteeship committee were greatly encouraged when they left the committee room early this morning. Only a few minor items remain to be considered and it was thought that the final okay on the trusteeship system could be given early next week.

ZHUKOV DOUBTS HITLER'S DEATH

one of which could have been that of Hitler but that nothing definite had been established. He said that friends close to Hitler said he committed suicide but that Russian investigators had not been able to verify their accounts.
"Possibly," Bezarin said, "he is hiding somewhere in Europe, probably in Spain."

The ruins of Hitler's chancellery were visited by correspondents but did not reveal any clues. The floors are still littered with private papers, dossiers and thousands of iron and silver crosses. The correspondents had a field day, rummaging through the rooms and collecting souvenirs from Hitler's desk.

The huge crystal chandelier had miraculously been preserved and on the splintered marble walls hundreds of Red army men and sightseers had scrawled their names and home towns.
The people of Berlin appeared to be as much puzzled about the Hitler mystery as the Russians were. They did most of the suicide rumors came from the British radio even before Berlin's fall. Bezarin said that many of the Berliners regularly listened to BBC during the war but that none of them dared admit it.

Bezarin said that there was no doubt that Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels committed suicide. He said that he had made a personal investigation of the fate of Goebbels, his wife and two children were found in one of the underground bunkers of the chancellery. Goebbels, he said, poisoned his children and wife with potassium cyanide and then took his own life.
"As for Hitler," he said "I leave it to you to find his body."

HITLER'S SILVER MAY BE USED ON AMERICAN TABLE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 9.—Mrs. Grace Polski waited patiently today to set her table with Adolf Hitler's silver.
Her husband, Pvt. Theodore Polski, 39, wrote her that he believed the 50-piece set of silver service he shipped her from Munich shortly after V-E day had belonged to the fuhrer.

Pvt. Polski said each article of the set, which came from Hitler's Munich home, was engraved the initials "A. H.", the German eagle, wreath and swastika.
Mrs. Polski hoped to soon get the package released from customs and see the souvenir for which her husband reported he turned down a major's offer of $500.

RUSSIANS ZONE GERMANY THIS WAY

THE SHADED AREA above, including large areas now in American and British hands, indicates the German territory which will be occupied by Russian troops, according to a Tass agency report broadcast by the Moscow radio. Allied zones have not been defined other than that British will be in the northwest, French in the west and Americans in the southwest. The Russian announcement, which was not authenticated by the Americans or British, came after the first meeting of the four-power Allied Control Council in Berlin. (International)

FRANCE AND SYRIA

SYRIA and Lebanon have declared themselves independent, and the French are trying to head them off. Why the French are particularly concerned is a story more than 400 years old.

Back in 1536 the French and the Turks concluded the first of a series of treaties by which finally France secured a favored position above all other countries. For a long time all European ships to Turkey, except the Venetian, had to sail under the French flag. The Christian missionaries in Turkey were almost exclusively French, and French became the second language of cultivated Turks.

To keep their hold, especially on Syria and Lebanon, which were nearer France than the rest of Turkey, the French took it upon themselves to protect the inhabitants from Turkish oppression. When Turkey should finally break up, France expected to inherit Syria and Lebanon.

After World War I the French did in fact get a mandate over these regions and interpreted it as meaning control. The Syrians and Lebanese, on the other hand, wished to be free, and have now so declared themselves.

With France not yet recovered from the war, any restoration of her control over Syria and Lebanon is likely to be in name only.

THE JAP BALLOONS

The Japanese are clever. There's no doubt about that. But there are times when they're not quite clever enough, as any man who has fought them can testify. One of their weakest points is their lack of understanding of American psychology.

For some time now, apparently, they have been dispatching those small balloons which carry bombs or incendiaries over the vast isolated reaches of our western states. The intention seems to have been to cause some immediate, unexpected damage in the way of casualties and forest fires, and as a result to send our people into a frenzy of hysterical fear.

Instead, the undirected balloons drifted casually to earth without inflicting any casualties, or causing damage enough to bother about. And the hysteria never did develop. On the contrary, although hundreds, in fact thousands, of people must have known of the landing of one or another, not a word has been spilled. The Japs still don't know where they landed.

It's just another illustration that we're not so dumb as they thought.

If anyone says there is no excitement in life at home, ask him if he has ever experienced the thrill of finding a sale of cigars.

Somehow the more we think about the late and unlamented Hitler having his own "personal photographer," the less enthusiastic we feel about having our own many pictures taken.

With the Truman family having six pianos in the house, it looks as if there would be plenty of music there.

WASHINGTON—Capitol observers anticipate that the AFL has a "hey-day" in sight with appointment of Judge Lewis B. Schwelienbach as secretary of labor. The new secretary has been loudly applauded by the AFL—the union that did not fare so well under Secretary Frances Perkins.

The CIO, "fair-haired boy" under the late President Roosevelt's administration, have been extremely silent on Schwelienbach's appointment. The late president was, in effect, his own labor secretary and the CIO did not join in the clamor to have Miss Perkins removed and have labor relations returned to the labor department's jurisdiction.

The AFL pickings were correspondingly lean under the old setup. Now the Federation hopes the government's labor relations will swing a little more in its direction.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

NEW YORK, June 9—Main reason Mr. Truman dispatched Messrs. Hopkins and Davies to Moscow and London has not been hinted.

The official explanation has been that they were to arrange an imminent meeting of the big three, which may be a broad truth conceived to cover a lot more important truths. Indeed, a suspicion is extant Mr. Truman has some new ideas on world affairs which he wished to test before pushing.

Yet the men had to go for a very simple and significant reason. From five Roosevelt associates at the Yalta conference, Mr. Truman received five different versions of what the agreement there actually was. All of them, including Mr. Hopkins, Anne Boettiger (who was as close to Mr. R. there as anyone being not only secretary but companion and confidant to her father), State Secretary Stettinius, politico-naval adviser Admiral Leahy and James F. Byrnes furnished variations and Mr. Byrnes is supposed to have some stenographic notes. All this conflicting evidence concerned not only ramifications of the veto-voting power of the big five, but many other important matters. The stenographic notes were called for, and analyzed, but they failed to clear the points of variance.

Further checking became imperative and Mr. Truman took the direct way of sending the man who knew most of the late President's mind on these matters, Hopkins, to Moscow, and a good lawyer, Joe Davies, to see Messrs. Churchill and Eden. It is quite possible the division of Germany (leaving us the smallest and least important portion, presumably because we need all our troops in the Pacific) is the first result of the mysterious journeys. There may be others.

Meanwhile a sort of sub-sub-committee of the United Nations conference peace enforcement committee has put forward a plan which revises the whole careful conception of the loose post-war organization and puts not only teeth but tusks into the charter—or rather into its proposed section of the charter as there may be other sections which round-off or put braces on the tusks.

This new provision, produced by a committee of which our friend Ecuador held the chairmanship, would give the governing security council of the new world undiscussed, sensational authority. It could wield armed forces against nonconformists, but far more than this power of military suppression, it could completely wreck a country economically by "complete or partial interruption of rail, sea, air postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication and (this last being the least) severance of diplomatic and economic relations."

How this could be done without completely occupying the miscreant nation, or bombing it into devastation the committee did not explain. But it also proposed, as if the foregoing were not enough, to "conduct demonstrations, (whatever these may be) blockade and other operations" of sea, land and air.

Now this devastation is not to be done by an international army, but by a "police" force maintained by each nation without itself, subject to orders from the security council. In short, the council could order Ecuador to do all these things to any other nation. The way it is specified to work, each nation would put its armies or "certain armed forces" at the disposal of

In the wake of British armed action and the bluntly-worded American note to France, there can be no doubt but that the two powers view France as the aggressor in the disturbances in Syria and Lebanon.

Some Types of Tumors That Often Grow on the Scalp

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MORE AND more have people been urged to be on the look-out for tumor growths no matter where they are. These tumors may occur on any part of the body. They are frequent on the scalp, and they may develop on the skin, the tissue under the skin, or the membrane around the skull.

Perhaps the most common form of tumor on the scalp is one known as a sebaceous cyst. These cysts are commonly known as wens. They may be small in size and stay that way for years or they may continue to grow until they reach the size of a grapefruit. As the cyst enlarges, the pressure may so interfere with the blood supply to the scalp that a spot of baldness occurs.

Fatty Fluids

These cysts are made up of a sac containing a thick sebaceous or fatty fluid. The longer the cyst is allowed to remain, the bigger it may become and the greater is the risk of complications, such as infection or ulcer formation in the skin due to pressure. Infection is a common complication. When it occurs, the cyst gets tender and tense.

If the infection recurs several times, the cyst wall becomes fastened to the scalp and a thick material develops within the cyst containing white blood cells and dead tissue cells. If an infected cyst breaks open, an ulcer or sore forms. If the contents of the cyst slowly escape day by day and dry in successive layers on the skin what is known as a sebaceous horn may develop. This horn is firmly attached at its bottom and may grow to several inches in length.

Thus, it may be seen that the sooner a sebaceous cyst is removed, the better. Even though the growth of the cyst may be slow, it practically always occurs. If no complications develop, the cyst can be removed with ease, but when complications such as infection have occurred, operation is more difficult.

As a general rule, operation for removal of the cyst can be done with a local anesthetic. A cut is made over the cyst and the wall of the cyst is then freed from the surrounding tissues and the entire cyst is easily removed in this way. If the wall is not completely removed, it is likely that the cyst will come back again.

Another type of tumor growth on the scalp is known as a lipoma, or fatty tumor. These tumors are soft, and freely movable in the scalp. They grow slowly as a rule, and cause no difficulty other than to interfere with the appearance. They can be easily removed, however, by a single operation.

Of course, whenever a growth appears on the scalp, an immediate examination by the doctor should be made to determine the type of tumor present. Operative treatment is generally required and when done early, the operations are simple and the growths easily eliminated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. W.—A friend of mine had a spot above the shoulder. Now spots like it are appearing on the other side. I have been told it is a skin cancer. Is it contagious?

Answer:—Cancer of the skin is not contagious. Of course, the cancer could spread through the blood to other parts of the person's body.

SYNOPSIS

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperwoman, has written a fairly successful novel. To gather material for a second book she has gone to the Argentine, her subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

Other characters are:
BROOKS KIMBERLY, owner of Ultimo Ventura, a race horse;
CORINNE ARTIGAS, Kimberly's fiancée; and
RAFF CORDOBA, architect and friend of Kimberly.

YESTERDAY: Terry witnesses a disagreement between Brooks Kimberly and Corinne and sees Brooks—and his China bull—win out.

CHAPTER TWELVE

TERRY LAY sunning herself languidly on the colored tile beside the pool.

The baroness was playing cards with Raff, reaching over to slap his hand whenever he attempted to quit.

"Do you see that beautiful creature by the pool?" he complained. "I want to make, as they say in her wonderful country, a flirtation."

"Play your ace and be quiet," ordered the baroness. "Men become more boring each season."

Jim, immaculate in black linen, her white hair glistening in the warm afternoon sun, embroidered with vigorous speed. She smiled at the baroness now. "I think Jules Artigas misses you, Roxie. He said when he called this morning you could come back to Buenos Aires and annoy him whenever you felt inclined."

"That won't be before the election," the baroness snorted. "My stars, how long is it yet?"

"A month," Terry replied. "I'll die," mourned the baroness. "I'll perish of boredom in this lonely hole."

Terry laughed lazily. "I died a week ago. This is heaven." She rolled over and sunned her back. It was almost ten days ago she came, she marveled. Never had days been so full of pleasure, so relaxing, so entirely complete.

Jim was saying, "You are a satisfying guest, Terry."

Terry answered, "You're a more than satisfying hostess, Jim."

"Oh bosh!" said the baroness. Terry and Jim exchanged a friendly smile. Never, Terry marveled to herself, had she liked any one more than this wholehearted, frank Argentine matron. She had expected to be interviewed on her family, her background, her right to accept an invitation to the exclusive House of Kimberly. But Jim had made no personal inquiries when mentioning her own visits to New York. She had liked the country, she said with enthusiasm. Everybody was busy, some of them looked quite mischievous, but all of them looked happy.

Terry soon realized it was Jim's energetic spirit that dominated the estancia. She understood Brooks' love for the place now, and his sense of responsibility. Jim knew of every repair and change necessary in the vast mansion and stables, every problem in the lives of her many servants, and the condition of every gaucho family on the estancia.

Jim was pleased with Terry's big sister attitude toward her devoted maid, Angela, and when Terry spoke of Angela's brother, she took her along one morning on her horseback ride around to the houses of the gaucho families.

Terry was more than gratified at this chance to see the relation between mistress and gauchos. She herself prattled on and on with her college Spanish to the peon families, amusing both herself and the peons. And Jim was superb. There was only one other woman, Terry thought, who could have taken the same vital interest in every detail of their welfare.

Eleonor.

Every day or so, between swimming, tennis, golf, pelota, and watching Raff and Brooks practice polo with Sandy and the grooms and occasional guests, she rode back to see Angela's small brother, Pedro, a cherub of a child. She was living the life of a princess, settling down to gay, informal rounds of sports and relaxation of an estancia summer with a sense of fitting into it that astonished herself. Her writing, done secretly each night, strangely seemed the unreal activity!

She had been there 12 nights on the evening she went with Brooks, Corinne and Raff for a drive. It was not the first time the four of them had taken one of the estancia cars for a fast drive along the endless, moonlit ribbons of road. Tonight they were peacefully content to listen to a rumba band over the radio and watch the moon rise toward the southern cross through the strange lovely blue of a pampas night. Brooks and Corinne had long ago made up their quarrel the night of China's illness. In fact, the next morning they had come up from the stables together to report to Senator Artigas and the politicians, who were returning to Buenos Aires, that China was out of danger.

And Terry had been charmed when, later that same day, they had come to her begging her forgiveness for their boisterous behavior before her, a guest. Forgive them! Terry could have kissed them! They were her hero and heroine, if they only knew it. She wouldn't have missed that show of fire and ambition in the slumberous dark beauty of Corinne for anything. Now if they would only show her romance.

This was more difficult. For a betrothed pair, their conduct was exasperating. Though Brooks was always by Corinne's side in the household gatherings, they never went off alone together. Even in their evening rides Raff and Terry were always on the back seat. This, apparently, was the strict code of Argentine behavior.

Tonight Brooks stopped at a small boliche. Terry was interested in the estancia, he said, when Corinne demurred. She mustn't miss one of its most common features. They went in and were escorted past the tables of welcoming peons to special tables reserved for the owners and mayordomos of the estancias. They drank mate from a tube in the dimly lit, smoke filled place and listened to the peons' talk of crops and to a gaucho singer who accompanied his morose musical monologue with a guitar.

Terry was thrilled. A perfect setting for a chapter! "Except for the local talent," she laughed, "this could be a country store at home."

Corinne's velvet gaze rested thoughtfully upon her. "Your family owned land then?" she murmured.

"My uncle owned a small farm in Vermont," Terry said. She gave the other girl a quick glance. She was about, she realized, to launch a series of questions on her family and her social status. In ten minutes, Terry knew with her own natural inclinations toward truth, Corinne would have her history and occupation. As a defense gesture, Terry threw up a barrage of anecdotes of her childhood, escapades of school days. She was still chattering as they drove home.

Corinne broke in once. "Your training is so different," she murmured. "I can see how now a Norte American girl can travel about alone."

Terry worried as she chattered on desperately. What have I said? What kind of impression have I given them?

She found out sooner than she expected. Brooks and Corinne had gone into Brooks' study on their arrival at the house, to take a phone message that had come during their ride. Raff took Terry to the foot of the great winding staircase. As Terry, on the second step, turned to say goodnight, he suddenly gathered her into his arms and kissed her with rough passion.

For one instant Terry was too stunned to resist. Then, hurt and angry, she struggled free, and when Raff tried to hold her she struck him a stinging blow.

"Raff!"

At the voice, Terry's heart did a power dive. Over Raff's shoulder she saw Brooks, standing in the hall, pipe in hand. But though his curt command was for Raff, his eyes were on her, kind but inscrutable. She turned and fled up the stairs.

THRILLS, drama, commotion and excitement characterize the lively and youthful activities of this day, in which any business interests demanding the attention might flourish and share the gaiety and joy of happy conditions. In any needful transactions, be sure to sign all agreements with extra precaution, seeing that facts and figures coincide, and that prodigality and careless use of funds be not detrimental.

Under this expansive, generous and heartwarming influence it is probable there may be a proclivity to run the gamut of the emotions, sensations and desires, with practical ideas set aside. Let allure, beauty, romance and festivity reign, but all in moderation.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are warranted in anticipating a year of much festivity, gaiety, parties, thrills and romance, even though these may upset all practical plans and wise calculations for future stability and security. A spirit of youth and beauty, with glamor, allure, bewilderment and enchantment are dominant, but likewise are illusion, confusion and ultimate footing of the bill, or paying the fiddler. This unless the propensity to lavish, extravagant and prodigal expenditure of the substance, funds, energies, ideas as well as ideals, be prudently and cautiously taken into consideration. In all needful transactions, weigh the facts and figures, read carefully all documents and be wary with all writings and correspondence. Leave no loopholes for treachery.

A child born on this day will have a great diversity of talents, with ideals as well as factual ideas, with a spirit of romance, adventure and drama that promise a colorful life.

This horn is firmly attached at its bottom and may grow to several inches in length.

Thus, it may be seen that the sooner a sebaceous cyst is removed, the better. Even though the growth of the cyst may be slow, it practically always occurs. If no complications develop, the cyst can be removed with ease, but when complications such as infection have occurred, operation is more difficult.

As a general rule, operation for removal of the cyst can be done with a local anesthetic. A cut is made over the cyst and the wall of the cyst is then freed from the surrounding tissues and the entire cyst is easily removed in this way. If the wall is not completely removed, it is likely that the cyst will come back again.

Another type of tumor growth on the scalp is known as a lipoma, or fatty tumor. These tumors are soft, and freely movable in the scalp. They grow slowly as a rule, and cause no difficulty other than to interfere with the appearance. They can be easily removed, however, by a single operation.

Of course, whenever a growth appears on the scalp, an immediate examination by the doctor should be made to determine the type of tumor present. Operative treatment is generally required and when done early, the operations are simple and the growths easily eliminated.

SYNOPSIS

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperman, has written a fairly successful novel. To gather material for a second book he has gone to the Argentine, his subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

BROOKS KIMBERLY, owner of Ultimo Ventura, a race horse; CORLINE ARTIGAS, Kimberly's fiancée, and RAFF CORDOBA, architect and friend of Kimberly.

YESTERDAY: Terry witnesses a disagreement between Brooks Kimberly and Corline and sees Brooks—and his China bull—win out.

CHAPTER TWELVE

TERRY LAY sunning herself languidly on the colored tile beside the pool.

The barones was playing cards with Raff, reaching over to slap his hand whenever he attempted to quit.

"Do you see that beautiful creature by the pool?" he complained. "I want to make, as they say in her wonderful country, a flirtation."

"Play your ace and be quiet," ordered the barones. "Men become more boring each season."

Jim, immaculate in black linen, her white hair glistening in the warm afternoon sun, embroidered with vigorous speed. She smiled at the barones now. "I think Jules Artigas misses you, Roxie. He said when he called this morning you could come back to Buenos Aires and annoy him whenever you felt inclined."

"That won't be before the election," the barones snorted. "My stars, how long is it yet?"

"A month,"

"I'll die," mourned the barones. "I'll perish of boredom in this lonely hole."

Terry laughed lazily. "I died a week ago. This is heaven." She rolled over and sunned her back. It was almost ten days ago she came, she marveled. Never had days been so full of pleasure, so relaxing, so entirely complete.

Jim was saying, "You are a satisfying guest, Terry."

Terry answered, "You're a more than satisfying hostess, Jim."

"Oh, both!" said the barones. "You both!"

Terry and Jim exchanged a friendly smile. Never, Terry marveled to herself, had she liked anyone more than this whole-hearted, frank Argentine matron. She had expected to be interviewed on her family, her background, her right to accept an invitation to the exclusive House of Kimberly. But Jim had made no personal inquiries when mentioning her own visits to New York. She had liked the country, she said with enthusiasm. Everybody was busy, some of them looked quite mischievous, but all of them looked happy.

Terry soon realized it was Jim's energetic spirit that dominated the estancia. She understood Brooks' love for the place now, and his sense of responsibility. Jim knew of every repair and change necessary in the vast manor and stables, every problem in the lives of her many servants, and the condition of every gaucho family on the estancia.

Jim was pleased with Terry's big sister attitude toward her devoted maid, Angela, and when Terry spoke of Angela's brother, she took her along one morning on her horseback ride around to the houses of the gaucho families.

Terry was more than gratified at this chance to see the relation between mistress and gauchos. She herself prattled on and on with her college Spanish to the peon families, amusing both herself and the peons. And Jim was superb. There was only one other woman, Terry thought, who could have taken the same vital interest in every detail of their welfare. Eleanor.

Every day or so, between swimming, tennis, golf, pelota and watching Raff and Brooks practice polo with Sandy and the groom and occasional guests, she rode back to see Angela's small brother, Pedro, a cherub of a child. She was living the life of a princess, settling down to gay, informal rounds of sports and relaxation of an estancia summer with a sense of fitting into it that astonished herself. Her writing, done secretly each night, strangely seemed the unreal activity.

She had been there 12 nights on the evening she went with Brooks, Corline and Raff for a drive. It was not the first time the four of them had taken one of the estancia cars for a fast drive along the endless, moonlit ribbons of road. Tonight they were peacefully content to listen to a rhumba band over the radio and watch the moon rise toward the southern cross through the strange lovely blue of a pampas night. Brooks and Corline had long ago made up their quarrel the night of China's illness. In fact, the next morning they had come up from the stables together to report to Senor Artigas and the politicians, who were returning to Buenos Aires, that China was out of danger.

And Terry had been charmed when, later that same day, they had come to her begging her forgiveness for their boorish behavior before her, a guest. Forgive them! Terry could have kissed them! They were her hero and heroine, if they only knew it. She wouldn't have missed that show of fire and ambition in the slumberous dark beauty of Corline for anything. Now if they would only show her romance.

This was more difficult. For a betrothed pair, their conduct was exemplary. Though Brooks was al-

A. F. L. Happy, C. I. O. Silent See Anderson Co-ordinating
On New Secretary of Labor Government Food Agencies

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Capitol observers anticipate that the AFL has a "hey-day" in sight with appointment of Judge Lewis B. Schwellenbach as secretary of labor. The new secretary has been loudly applauded by the AFL—the union that did not fare so well under Secretary Perkins.

The CIO, "fair-haired boys" under the late President Roosevelt's administration, have been extremely silent on Schwellenbach's appointment. The late president was, in effect, his own labor secretary and the CIO did not join in the clamor to have Miss Perkins removed and have labor relations returned to the labor department's jurisdiction.

The AFL pickings were correspondingly lean under the old setup. Now the Federation hopes the government's labor relations will swing a little more in its direction.

CAPITOL HILL SOURCES hear that Rep. Clinton Anderson (D) of New Mexico, who takes over July 1 as chief of the agriculture department and combined war food administration, will be given some control over the OPA. It is expected that Anderson will take over coordination of all government food agencies—and that

FRANCE'S POSITION in the Middle East disturbances has provoked stern rebukes from the United States and is viewed gravely in London.

In the wake of British armed action and the bluntly-worded American note to France, there can be no doubt but that the two powers view France as the aggressor in the disturbances in Syria and Lebanon.

The conflict has brought another reduction in the evaluation of Gen. Charles DeGaulle by the Allied world.

IN 1944, SAYS THE CENSUS BUREAU, about seven out of every 100 babies born in the United States started life with the handicap of not having their birth registered.

TOP SECRET SURROUNDS plans for the civilian control of Germany, but it will not be soft, military observers declare. Chief difficulty in Germany, however, is getting together with the Russians over the difficult barriers of language and independent ideas of what should be done.

It is believed that ultimate common recognition of the type of government to exercise control promises great difficulty which may make the Polish problem pale.

Secretary Stettinius neatly describes this nation as "a big brother, not a bully."

It should be remembered, too, that Japan still has a Russian spanking coming to her.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, June 9

THRILLS, drama, commotion and excitement characterize the lively and youthful activities of this day, in which any business interests demanding the attention might flourish and share the gaiety and joy of happy conditions. In any needful transactions, be sure to sign all agreements with extra precaution, seeing that facts and figures coincide, and that prodigality and careless use of funds be not detrimental.

Under this expansive, generous and heartwarming influence it is probable there may be a proclivity to run the gamut of the emotions, sensations and desires, with practical ideas set aside. Let allure, beauty, romance and festivity reign, but all in moderation.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is are warranted in anticipating a year of much festivity, gaiety, parties, thrills and romance, even though these may upset all practical plans and wise calculations for future stability and security. A spirit of youth and beauty, with glamor, allure, bewilderment and enchantment are dominant, but likewise are illusion, confusion and ultimate footing of the bill, or paying the fiddler. This unless the propensity to lavish, extravagant and prodigal expenditure of the substance, funds, energies, ideas as well as ideals, be prudently and cautiously taken into consideration. In all needful transactions, weigh the facts and figures, read carefully all documents and be wary with all writings and correspondence. Leave no loopholes for treachery.

A child born on this day will have a great diversity of talents, with ideals as well as factual ideas, with a spirit of romance, adventure and drama that promise a colorful life.

The Ministry of Jesus

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew; Mark; Luke; John

After John the Baptist was put into prison, Jesus came into Galilee and began to preach the gospel, saying, "The kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe in the gospel."

Jesus came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up. He entered, as His custom was, into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read, "The spirit of the Lord is upon Me."

Handing back the book to the attendant, Jesus said, "Today hath this scripture been fulfilled in your ears," but those who had known Him as a boy, doubted that He was the Messiah.

Jesus knew that He must soon die on the cross, and began to teach His disciples that He would be crucified, and rise again on the third day.

SERMON THEME
SUNDAY MORNING

"Personal Influence" has been chosen by the Rev. Clarence Swearingen, pastor of First Methodist church as his Sunday morning sermon topic.

The thesis will show the strength and influence of human personality, both positive and negative.

After John the Baptist was put into prison, Jesus came into Galilee and began to preach the gospel, saying, "The kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe in the gospel."

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Matthew; Mark; Luke; John

Jesus came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up. He entered, as His custom was, into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read, "The spirit of the Lord is upon Me."

Handing back the book to the attendant, Jesus said, "Today hath this scripture been fulfilled in your ears," but those who had known Him as a boy, doubted that He was the Messiah.

Jesus knew that He must soon die on the cross, and began to teach His disciples that He would be crucified, and rise again on the third day.

16 MAY START IN 1945 DERBY

Track Conditions Uncertain For What May Be Richest 'Run For The Roses'

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 9—Derby day dawned in this Kentucky horse racing home today with uncertain track conditions and the wartime ban on racing combining to make the 71st annual running of America's premier turf event a wide open affair.

Although five horses were accorded a slight edge in the field of 16, owners and trainers were wondering as much as the $2 better what their horses could do on a track which at its best will only be good. But favored group was Jeep, Hoop Jr., Pot O'Luck, Alexis and Darby Dieppe.

The forecast of thundershowers for the run for the roses, scheduled for 5:15 p. m. CWT., threatened to cut down the field. Two of the entrants, Burning Dream and Kenilworth Lad, probably will not go if the going to heavy, while Jacobee also was a doubtful starter because of a leg injury in shipping from New York.

Should they all go, the money to the winner will be the highest in Derby history—$64,850 net. Each withdrawal—owners can scratch their thoroughbreds within 45 minutes of post time—will decrease that purse $500.

But with the race such a wide open affair, it was probable that all the horses entered will face the barrier. The rainy weather of the past two days, with the forecast of more rain, appeared sure to keep the prediction of Col. Matt Winn, father of the Derby, from being fulfilled. Early in the week he thought the crowd for this third wartime street-car derby would exceed the previous high attendance for the blue grass classic—95,000 (estimated) in 1941 when Whirlaway won.

FACTS, FIGURES ON 1945 DERBY

HE MAY BE DERBY CHOICE

POT O'LUCK, the Calumet Farm hope in the Kentucky Derby, is shown working out at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky. Pot O'Luck ran fifth in the Derby Trial last Saturday as Darby Dieppe, a long shot, won. But Pot O'Luck was closing and the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter should be just right for him. ## 16 MAY START IN 1945 DERBY

Track Conditions Uncertain
For What May Be Richest
'Run For The Roses'

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 9—Derby day dawned in this Kentucky horse racing home today with uncertain track conditions and the wartime ban on racing combining to make the 71st annual running of America's premier turf event a wide open affair.

Although five horses were accorded a slight edge in the field of 16, owners and trainers were wondering as much as the $2 bettor what their horses could do on a track which at its best will only be good. But favored group was Jeep, Hoop Jr., Pot O'Luck, Alexis and Darby Dieppe.

The forecast of thundershowers for the run for the roses, scheduled for 5:15 p. m. CWT, threatened to cut down the field. Two of the entrants, Burning Dream and Kenilworth Lad, probably will not go if the going to heavy, while Jacobie also was a doubtful starter because of a leg injury in shipping from New York.

Should they all go, the money to the winner will be the highest in Derby history—$64,850 net. Each withdrawal—owners can scratch their thoroughbreds within 45 minutes of post time—will decrease that purse $500.

But with the race such a wide open affair, it was probable that all the horses entered will face the barrier. The rainy weather of the past two days, with the forecast of more rain, appeared sure to keep the prediction of Col. Matt Winn, father of the Derby, from being fulfilled. Early in the week he thought the crowd for this third wartime street-car derby would exceed the previous high attendance for the blue grass classic—95,000 (estimated) in 1941 when Whirlaway won.

ALL STARS COP 4 TO 1 VICTORY AT LOCKBOURNE

Bill Hobbie Almost Blanks Bombers; Byrd Blasts Home Run In 11th

Circleville night softball league All Stars scored a 4-1 victory at Lockbourne Friday night in a thrilling 11-inning contest.

Bill Hobbie, young Junior Chamber of Commerce pitcher, was the hero of the All Star victory over the team that won here in a Memorial Day game. Hobbie scattered seven hits over the 11 innings. He allowed two hits in the fourth, but the Bombers would not have scored if the only two errors of the All Stars had not been committed in that frame. For the last three innings Hobbie did not give a single hit. He walked only one man and struck out four.

The All Stars did not score until the sixth when Hobbie walked and counted the tying run on Thomas' hit.

The 1-1 score remained until the top of the 11th

PICKAWAY COUNTY OFFICERS JOIN IN MANHUNT FOR FOUR ROBBERS

LATEST VICTIM OF DESPERADOS ROBBED OF $600

All Night Search Staged In Vicinity Of Mooresville In Ross County

Pickaway county authorities have joined in the search for four men, wanted for an assortment of crimes, latest of which was perpetrated in eastern Ross county Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious, Probation Officer, John Kerns and Court Bailiff Ralph Leist, Friday night joined highway patrolmen and officers of surrounding counties in a futile all-night search in the vicinity of Mooresville.

The local officers returned early Saturday but the search was being continued by Ross county officers and highway patrolmen. Authorities in other sections of the state and nearby states have been notified to be on the lookout for the men.

Objects of the widespread manhunt are wanted for armed robbery, auto larceny, theft of government property and other crimes.

The four men who are sought by the police officers are: Lee Legg, 25; Samuel Rothe, 18; Harvey Lowe, 28; and Edward Hall, 21, all from Hanley, W. Va. Two of the men are veterans of World War II, one of the suspected of being a mental case.

The men have been sought in two states since Saturday, June 2, when they robbed the Charleston armory of two 30 caliber rifles and two 45 caliber Thompson sub-machine guns. The FBI has filed an affidavit for the theft of government property.

Tuesday, June 5, the four men stole a 1936 Plymouth coach in West Virginia. The men abandoned the Plymouth near Mooresville Friday and stole a 1942 Mercury coupe, license No. 690 KF, from Edward Barnes, Route 6, Mooresville. They also took Mr. Barnes' watch and $600 in twenty dollar bills. They left Mr. Barnes and his son tied in a woods. It took them about an hour to free themselves of their bonds and notify the police.

The men are wanted for armed robbery and auto larceny, in two states, and for stealing government property. Police have been warned that they are probably dangerous.

WATER PLANT TRIAL RECESSES FOR WEEKEND

Testimony and cross examination of Rollin F. MacDowell, Cleveland engineer, was completed Friday by the counsel for the City of Circleville in its appropriation suit against the Ohio Water Service company. Mr. MacDowell was placed on the witness stand by the water company as an expert at water plant evaluation.

The Cleveland engineer was on the witness stand for two and one half days. He provided the common pleas court jury with his opinion of the replacement costs of the Circleville water company's property.

Earl Parker, Pike county common pleas court judge, dismissed the jury for the week-end at 4 p. m. Friday and told them to report for duty at the trial at 10 a. m. Monday.

The appropriation suit started Monday morning with the selecting of the jury. Tuesday prosecution and defense attorneys told the jurors what they expected to show them during the trial. Judge Parker Tuesday afternoon overruled a defense motion for a new trial and sent the jury to view the water plant in the custody of the sheriff. Wednesday the defense brought three witnesses to the stand; Oliver Fox, water company manager; Clarence Martin, plant maintenance man, and Mr. MacDowell, Cleveland engineer. All witnesses furnished testimony as to what they thought the water company's Circleville plant was worth or the condition the equipment was in.

50 ATTEND MEETING
Mrs. William Moss was assisting hostess when Mrs. Harley Moss entertained the Whistler aid society at which 50 members and guests were present.

The meeting opened with the song "Onward Christian Soldiers." Mrs. Gerald Patrick was in charge of the devotionals, reading from Timothy, chapter 6, first to 12th verses. The prayer was from the pamphlet "Upper Room." The short business session was closed by singing "Trust and Obey."

Mrs. Walter Parker was in charge of the program which consisted of a reading by Mrs. Alfred Goodman; piano duet, Mrs. Dwight Rector and Mrs. Leslie Dearth; readings by Mrs. Ernest Enoch; musical selections by Jean and Marjorie Dearth. Mrs. Parker conducted two interesting contests.

Refreshments of strawberries, ice cream and cake were served.

PICKAWAY COUNTY OFFICERS JOIN IN MANHUNT FOR FOUR ROBBERS

LATEST VICTIM OF DESPERADOS ROBBED OF $600

All Night Search Staged In Vicinity Of Mooresville In Ross County

Pickaway county authorities have joined in the search for four men, wanted for an assortment of crimes, latest of which was perpetrated in eastern Ross county Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious, Probation Officer, John Kerns and Court Bailiff Ralph Leist, Friday night joined highway patrolmen and officers of surrounding counties in a futile all-night search in the vicinity of Mooresville.

The local officers returned early Saturday but the search was being continued by Ross county officers and highway patrolmen. Authorities in other sections of the state and nearby states have been notified to be on the lookout for the men.

Objects of the widespread manhunt are wanted for armed robbery, auto larceny, theft of government property and other crimes.

The four men who are sought by the police officers are: Lee Legg, 25; Samuel Rothe, 18; Harvey Lowe, 28; and Edward Hall, 21, all from Hanley, W. Va. Two of the men are veterans of World War II, one of the suspected of being a mental case.

The men have been sought in two states since Saturday, June 2, when they robbed the Charleston armory of two 30 caliber rifles and two 45 caliber Thompson sub-machine guns. The FBI has filed an affidavit for the theft of government property.

Tuesday, June 5, the four men stole a 1936 Plymouth coach in West Virginia. The men abandoned the Plymouth near Mooresville Friday and stole a 1942 Mercury coupe, license No. 690 KP, from Edward Barnes, Route 6, Mooresville. They also took Mr. Barnes' watch and $600 in twenty dollar bills. They left Mr. Barnes and his son tied in a woods. It took them about an hour to free themselves of their bonds and notify the police.

The men are wanted for armed robbery and auto larceny, in two states, and for stealing government property. Police have been warned that they are probably dangerous.

WATER PLANT TRIAL RECESSES FOR WEEKEND

Testimony and cross examination of Rollin F. MacDowell, Cleveland engineer, was completed Friday by the counsel for the City of Circleville in its appropriation suit against the Ohio Water Service company. Mr. MacDowell was placed on the witness stand by the water company as an expert at water plant evaluation.

The Cleveland engineer was on the witness stand for two and one half days. He provided the common pleas court jury with his opinion of the replacement costs of the Circleville water company's property.

Earl Parker, Pike county common pleas court judge, dismissed the jury for the week-end at 4 p. m. Friday and told them to report for duty at the trial at 10 a. m. Monday.

The appropriation suit started Monday morning with the selecting of the jury. Tuesday prosecution and defense attorneys told the jurors what they expected to show them during the trial. Judge Parker Tuesday afternoon overruled a defense motion for a new trial and sent the jury to view the water plant in the custody of the sheriff. Wednesday the defense brought three witnesses to the stand: Oliver Fox, water company manager; Clarence Martin, plant maintenance man, and Mr. MacDowell, Cleveland engineer. All witnesses furnished testimony as to what they thought the water company's Circleville plant was worth or the condition the equipment was in.
